

Finding Full Text Online

Finding full text for an article from a citation is not difficult. This guide shows you how to locate full text using the eJournals menu.

1. On the UofGH Library homepage select the eJournals tab. Choose the library collection you wish to search. Start with Guelph's collection, since it is larger than Humber's.

2. Enter the journal title in the title search box and click Go. Make sure you're entering the title of the Journal not the article title. Hint: in APA references, Journal Title is in italics.

3. Note that different databases provide full text for different date ranges. Choose the database that includes the publication date for your article.

4. In the database, locate the list of volumes and issues. Navigate to the issue that contains your article.

Hint: Look for links labeled All Issues or Archive.

5. Locate the article inside the issue. Click to access a PDF or HTML full text version of the article.

If you're having trouble accessing full text, contact UofGH Library Services for assistance.

If an item is not available from our library collections, order using the RACER interlibrary loan service.
